Art Unit: 2857

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

3. Claims 30-34, 41, 42, 44, 74-78, 85-86, 88 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cheng et al. (6,516,274 B2).

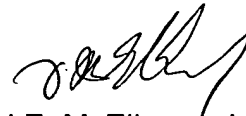

See the abstract, which tersely describes the patent's key concepts where "skeleton patches" are developed from analysis of seismic data volumes to determine and model seismic fault regions. While this reference uses some of the same concept terminology as applicants, it lacks the use of identical terminology as instant applicants do in the descriptive use and operations involving volumes of data (i.e. "dip volumes"). Nevertheless such are seen to serve the equivalent functions as served by applicants' terms "voxels" and "cubes". Likewise the terms "plane" and "lattice" are deemed the equivalents of the fault patch segments and their intersections. Thus it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art for one to be their own lexicographer for describing equivalent functional operations upon the data for the same purposes of seismic fault delineation and modeling, and also that even though the geometric shapes may be different they can serve the same functional purposes in the context of such fault analysis.

4. Claims 1-29, 35-40, 45-73, 79-84 stand allowed. The prior art is not seen to teach the specific fault analysis steps.
5. Claims 43 and 87 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
6. The remaining newly prior art is cited of pertinence to the claimed inventive concepts for determination of fault regions and their modeling with assistance by automatic analytical methods.
